

Closing Remarks

Adrian Shubert:

I have racked my brain to come up with something that wasn't entirely superfluous. The only thing that I came up with that might be close is this. At dinner on Wednesday night, when we were all getting to know each other, Rhoda mentioned to me that she accepted the invitation to come to this conference, among the many invitations that she gets, was the spirit that underlay it. That was a really wonderful thing. From that moment on, I just hoped that this spirit materialized. From everything I have heard, especially in this wrap up session, it's certainly seems that it has. That for me personally and the rest of us who have been working on this since last August, all of us have been involved in many conferences and sometimes they go well and sometimes not. Very rarely do they go like this. I just want to thank all of you, especially those of you in the audience. Some of you have been with us for the full two days.

Thank you all.
